

I think you need to leave the DO NOT CALL LIST law in New Jersey alone. This law is good for the public and good for the majority. The seniors of this country are much more prone to purchase services/items they don't need because of pressures from telemarketers. If the NJ law is tougher than the federal law, maybe it's time to revise the federal law. I realize this may not be a popular idea with some lobbyist. However, law are meant to protect the people, not the vendors of this country.
